Section 1: Non-exclusive licence to publish and distribute a thesis

As a condition of award you must submit the final version of your thesis in electronic format to the University. The final version must be the copy approved by the examiners once the necessary corrections have been completed. The Library will catalogue your thesis and the abstract and full-text electronic file will be made available to the public to read and download through the online catalogue, and other digital services (e.g. British Library's EThoS service). It is an expectation of the University of Edinburgh that most doctoral theses will be made publicly available; however, you may request a one-year restriction without requiring Head of School authorisation. If you require a longer embargo please fill in Section 2 overleaf.

	Default immediate access commencing from the accession date (the date the work is added to the Library's collection).
	12-month embargo commencing from the accession date (the date the work is added to the Library's collection).

Extra information: any special requirements can be noted here (optional).

The 12-month embargo can be extended one year at a time up to a total of five years without the need for approval by Head of School. To request an extension please contact the Library (scholcomms@ed.ac.uk) as the expiry date approaches and the Scholarly Communications Team will confirm the new expiry date by return.

Note that the bibliographic details, including the title, author and abstract, of the restricted theses will still be made publicly available. At the end of the embargo period, the University is under no obligation to contact you about extending the period of restriction. If you require a longer restriction period please complete Section 2 overleaf.

For the purpose of future preservation and accessibility the University of Edinburgh may, without changing the content, translate the thesis to any medium or format.

I hereby grant the University of Edinburgh a non-exclusive licence to publish and distribute this thesis, as described in the paragraphs above, for scholarly purposes and with proper acknowledgement of authorship [Sign or type name below]:

Section 2: Request to restrict access to a thesis longer than one year

IN EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES, authors may ask the University to restrict access to the thesis for a longer period. To submit a request for consideration, please obtain your Head of School's signed agreement.

I request that no access of any kind be permitted to this thesis for years. I understand:

- (i) that "no access" means that no one, not even I, or my supervisor, or my Head of School, or Library staff will have access to the thesis;
- (ii) that at the end of the restriction period the thesis will be made available to the public unless I make a request for the restriction to be extended.
- (iii) The University of Edinburgh is under no obligation to contact me about extending the period of restriction.

If requested prior to award confirmation, this will commence from the accession date (the date the work is added to the Library's collection), or from the date the request is accepted by the library.

Certificate by the University of Edinburgh Head of School:

I have read the above paragraph and I support the request for restriction of access for the following reason(s):

	Future publication: The thesis contains information about research in progress where there is an intention to publish at a later date.
	Personal or confidential data: The thesis contains sensitive information where disclosure would be an actionable breach of confidence, or could prejudice the interests of an individual.
	Patent application: The thesis contains intellectual property that may be the subject of commercial exploitation.
	Contractual obligations: Agreements with my sponsor or thesis partners include restrictions on making my thesis publicly available.
Other: If possible, please give further details:

The Freedom of Information (Scotland) Act 2002 requires the University to make available to any enquirer any information held by the University, unless one of the legislation's narrowly defined exemption applies. In the event that anyone asks to see the thesis, we will use this information to determine whether it qualifies for a freedom of information exemption and can be withheld.
